Resource Count: 1

This circa 1875 shed-roofed commercial building sits on the SW corner of W. Saratoga Street and Park Avenue. It abuts a partywall structure to the west. The two-bay, four-story, brick building has a street frontage of 15'6" and a depth of 105'. The building has been covered with circa 1960s formstone.

The entrance is on the clipped corner. The glass door has a canopy produced by the corners of the upper stories. The vestibule is laid with an aggregate pebble floor. Two large display windows project slightly from the plane of the facade, creating a boxed display area.

The second, third, and fourth stories have 2/2 sash round top windows. The formstone is laid in mock voussoirs and keystone lintels.

The Park Avenue facade is five bays. It is also covered in formstone. The first story contains the clipped corner entrance in the first bay. The second bay contains two small display windows. The third and fourth bays are blank. The fifth bay has a 3-sided boxed display window. At the far south end of the fifth bay is a nineteenth-century double door with narrow panels with elongated glass panels and an original, tall transom.

The second, third, and fourth stories have five 2/2 sash windows with formstone sills and voussoir and keystone lintels.

The interior is finished with peg board and an acoustical tile ceiling.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This two-bay, four-story building is a much-altered example of a late nineteenth-century commercial building that has been completed encased in 1960s formstone. The building contains two separated entrances, one on Saratoga Street and the other on Park Avenue. The Saratoga Street entrance, actually on the clipped corner in good period tradition, serves the first floor and the Park Avenue entrances serves the upper stories. Likely the first floor was used for commercial purposes and the upper floors for residences or offices. This building thus represents the commercial-residential mix of the neighborhood in the nineteenth century. The narrow width of the building indicates a fairly low-income class of occupants. Architectural historian Richard Longstreth writes that "shop-houses prevailed in emerging commercial centers of cities and towns alike through the early decades of the 19th century. Examples can still be seen in areas that have not experienced radical change, even though the shopfronts themselves have almost always been altered. . . the upper section retaining a domestic character."<sup>1</sup> In this particular example, the residential nature of the upper stories prevailed through to the present century.

Architecturally, this building reveals little of its nineteenth-century roots. Rather the formstone veneer is an example of urban architectural renewal-- Baltimore 1960s style.
